interdisciplinary seminar will emphasize the development of analytical reading, writing, and speaking skills through the lens of examining the relationship of the individual to society. Students will examine human thought and imagination from various perspectives, including philosophy, history, literature, science, religion, and art. The course will pay particular attention to how the main branches of academic inquiry—humanities, natural sciences, social sciences, and arts and creativity—address the relationship between individuals and the social worlds in which they find themselves.

The lecturer position may include responsibilities for special programs on an as needed basis. Typically, the distribution of effort will be 75% teaching, 18% program administration and 5% research/scholarship; 2% Professional Development. The terms of appointment and re-appointment for this position are governed by the University of Kentucky Administrative Regulations (re: AR 2:9)

Applications must include a cover letter as well as a curriculum vitae. Please also include the names and contact information for at least three references when prompted in the application. This information may be used to solicit reference letters from your references within the employment system.

Questions should be addressed to the Dean of the Lewis Honors College, Christian Brady at Christian.brady@uky.edu.
