Job Description

The Department of Africana and American Studies (AAS) at University at Buffalo (UB), The State University of New York is recruiting for a tenure-track faculty colleague at the rank of Assistant or Associate Professor.

We seek a scholar who researches and studies carceral cultures and abolition futures in a humanistic fashion. Candidates should have a focus on the cultural and social lives of black people and an understanding of how societal institutions intersect with Black life.

We seek a scholar whose research and teaching critically engage Abolition in a wide array of ways and who understand it as both theory and praxis. We understand that abolition is larger than the carceral and therefore we seek scholars who have a rich and deep understanding of the mechanisms that make abolition a philosophy of how we live together. The candidate might be interested in working with local and national communities on advocacy, activism, art, and other interventions into carceral cultures with an abolition future-oriented perspective. Feminist approaches to abolition are specifically welcomed.

Candidates should hold a PhD in Black Studies, Africana Studies or an equivalent or relevant degree in the field with a focus on Black people and Black life.

Scholars whose work focuses on the USA as well as areas of expertise across the Black world are especially encouraged to apply. We seek candidates whose work is both national and international in its focus and reach and can concentrate on the geographical areas of, for example, the Caribbean, Africa, USA, Latin and South America, Canada, Europe, or the UK.

Areas of interests may include but are not limited to:

- Carceral Theories
- Theories of Abolition
- Abolitionist Futures
- Carceral Geographies
- Carcerality and Health
- Carcerality and Disability
- Critical Theory and Abolition
- Afropessimism and Abolition
- Philosophies of Emancipation and Freedom
- Feminist Theories of Abolition
