ensure robust library support for teaching, research, outreach, and service needs of the university community, particularly in the area studies centers. As a leader within the Libraries, the Head of Area Studies demonstrates in-depth knowledge of trends and emerging solutions in areas relevant to area studies; engages in appropriate international, national, and consortial dialogs; seeks mutually beneficial collaborations with peer institutions; and contributes to the fields of librarianship and area studies through active professional engagement.

The Head of Area Studies manages, supervises, and provides direction for a cohort of librarians who understand and can interpret the current landscape of new research methodologies and technologies to advance and deepen research support, and who can strategically advance teaching and learning initiatives aimed at student success. The Head of Area Studies promotes global collections for research, teaching, and learning.

The Head of Area Studies seeks opportunities to learn and collaborate using leadership skills to define problems, provide solutions, and support colleagues in their own professional growth. They consistently demonstrate commitment to our values and promote an organizational culture of Discovery, Connection, Equity, Integrity, and Stewardship, modeling The Ohio State University's shared values.

The Head of Area Studies has a subject specialty as well as a managerial role. As a subject librarian, this individual also serves as a subject liaison to faculty, undergraduate, and graduate programs; is knowledgeable regarding scholarly communication and publishing patterns of the area supported; manages and builds a distinctive research collection; and is familiar and conversant with research methodologies and emerging trends in pedagogy. The Head of Area Studies understands current practices in the field and develops a repertoire of strategies for staying current with disciplinary priorities and initiatives.
