Position description

The Oral History Center (OHC) of The Bancroft Library at UC Berkeley seeks to hire an oral historian to fill a non-faculty position of academic specialist in recent U.S. history, with expertise in at least one of the following fields: ethnic studies; public history; political history; gender and sexuality; arts, culture, and philanthropy; law and jurisprudence; community history; and the history of education. The academic specialist conceives of, develops, and manages oral history projects; writes proposals; conducts interviews; participates in and coordinates educational initiatives; and engages in public outreach activities and interpretive work, such as podcasts. The position is funded partly through existing contracts and donations, and the candidate is expected to raise funds for projects they propose in collaboration with colleagues.

Associate Specialists are normally expected to have a record of academic accomplishments, including contributions to published or in-press research in the field and a demonstrated record of University and/or public service.

We seek an individual who possesses expertise in one or more of the above-mentioned fields, who is also versatile enough to interview in areas outside their immediate area of knowledge as needed, all under the umbrella of institutional oral history and publicly engaged scholarship. Although some interviewing will likely be conducted remotely, much of the work will be performed in-person in the San Francisco Bay Area. The position requires occasional travel.

Responsibilities

The academic specialist works independently and collaboratively with their colleagues under the general supervision of the director to:

- Plan and coordinate oral history projects documenting various historical topics that align with the strategic direction of the OHC and the UC Library
- Create work plans and budgets, including securing necessary funds, for in-depth oral history interviews and multi-interview projects
- Research and conduct interviews
- Work alongside research, editorial, and technical staff in all aspects of oral history processing, including editing, overseeing production tasks, preparing supporting material, and developing multimedia content
- Assist in development and management of educational initiatives, including but not limited to the annual advanced oral history institute, introductory oral history workshop, and K-12 curricula
- The UC Berkeley Library is committed to supporting and encouraging a multicultural environment and seeks candidates who can make positive and imaginative contributions in a context of ethnic and cultural diversity.

Environment

The UC Berkeley Library is an internationally renowned research and teaching facility at one of the nation's premier public universities. In a highly diverse and intellectually rich environment, Berkeley serves a campus community of 25,500 undergraduate students, 10,300 graduate students, and a faculty of 1,500. The Library comprises 20 campus libraries - including the Doe/Moffitt Libraries, the Bancroft Library, the C.V. Starr East Asian Library and subject specialty libraries. With a collection of more than 11 million volumes and a collections budget of over $15 million, the Library offers extensive collections in all formats and robust services to connect users with those collections and build their related research skills.

The OHC documents the history of California, the nation, and beyond by producing video-recorded and transcribed oral histories and carefully researched interpretative materials for the widest possible use. Since its inception in 1953, OHC has carried out interviews in a variety of major subject areas, which include: politics and government; law and jurisprudence; arts and letters; business and labor; social and community history; University of California history; natural resources and the environment; and science, medicine, and technology. Interviews have been used as source material for monographs, books, articles, stage productions, radio programs, video and film documentaries, websites and blogs, and dissertations and theses. OHC has conducted over 5,000 oral histories, which totals tens of thousands of interview hours. Nearly every interview that has been transcribed is available for the public to read on the OHC website.
